➤ Bishop's Easter Message:

The whole point of Easter is that God the creator has dealt with everything that messes up his wonderful world, and has set in motion his plan to sort it all out, to put it all right, to remake it so that it is filled with his glory and beauty. And we, who hear the news of this, even though it doesn't make much sense to the world around, are called to be the advance runners for this project.

From one point of view this means working for justice – to put things right, to remind our rulers and authorities that that's their job and to hold them to account for it, to be alert to the places where injustice is done and speak up about it.

It means working to heal and renew our wonderful planet, making it fruitful and abundant and preventing it from being poisoned. Easter is about God's new creation and we are called, surprising though it may seem, to be agents of that new creation here and now.

Second, to be agents of new creation we must ourselves become, and live as, people of new creation. And that means holiness, which means rediscovering what a full and genuine human life was always meant to be like. Our world has lived on so many lies and half-truths about what it means to be human.

We are called to be Easter people, resurrection people, leaving behind in the grave all that spoils and downgrades our human calling. To be people of new creation, people of justice and beauty, we must be people of worship. We have heard the great story which carries us forwards as God's people, the story of God's mighty acts from creation to new creation.

That story is the heart of our worship, and as we find ourselves caught up in it again we turn it into prayer and praise and Eucharist. Christian worship, and the carefully structured liturgy which makes sure we are really paying attention to the whole Counsel of God, shapes us as communities, and shapes our personal characters, so that we really are worshipping the living God made known in the resurrection of his Son, and so that our habits of life, communal and personal, may bit by bit be brought into line with the new day that has dawned.

Alleluia, Christ is Risen
May you have a Blessed Easter.
